FAQs

How do I find out where my property boundaries are?

In most circumstances, the fencing or remains of fencing are the best indication of where property boundaries are. However, it is not uncommon for fences to be significantly out of position. For this reason it is a good idea to discuss your particular circumstances with a professional surveyor to work out whether a survey of your boundaries and their marking on the ground is needed.

Who can survey my property boundaries?

A licensed surveyor is the only person legally entitled to do a survey to determine and mark property boundaries on the ground.

Where do I find a licensed surveyor?

Surveyor-General Victoria (DELWP), The Institution of Surveyors Victoria and Consulting Surveyors Victoria have teamed up and put together a list of surveying firms willing to provide free professional advice on property boundary surveys.

You are encouraged to contact one of the professional surveyors on the list to get free advice on whether a survey for your property is needed. If a survey is needed, the firms on the list have indicated that they are willing to do the work at a discounted rate, only covering costs or less.
